Gloves

1. Mountain Hardwear Red Savina // $300

Three rechargeable lithium batteries in each glove power a heating system that relies on sensors to regulate temperature. In warm conditions, the heat stays off; bury your hands during a digger and it kicks in. mountainhardwear.com

1

2. Kombi Ripped Gore II // $60

The PrimaLoft-insulated and waterproof/breathable Ripped has a moisture-wicking liner made of odor-resistant bamboo charcoal. kombisports.com

5

3. Backcountry.com In-Bounds // $80

Fluted bands across the knuckles + wool insulation that doesn't bunch up = the best-fitting glove here. backcountry.com

6

4. Seirus Xtreme // $50

Backcountry skiing, hiking, snowshoeing, skate skiing. We did it all in this versatile soft-shell glove. seirus.com

6

5. Hestra Eco-Cure // $160

Removable wool liner. Remarkably supple. And the leather is made without any synthetic dyes or harmful metals. hestrausa.com

2

6. 180s Model Patrol // $80

Removable liner, elastic leash, chamois, goggle squeegee, iPod-wheel fingertip dots: If the Patrol had a bathroom, you could sublet it. 180s.com

7

KILLER VALUE

7. FlyLow Tough Gloves // $25

FlyLow takes a classic pigskin-and-Thinsulate work glove and oven-bakes it with a beeswax coating. The result: warmth and water resistance for the price of dinner. flylowgear.com

3

8. Gordini Fever // $50

This highly breathable spring glove is insulated with recycled wool and Thinsulate. gordini.com —DAVE COX
